

An Introduction for Parents

Ms. Tjasa Ames, one of our high school math teachers, recommended this program to our superintendent and our school board and they approved it!

We signed up for this program to help teachers better communicate with you and for you to communicate with them.

Other people in the district can also use this program.

Parents can't always pick up the phone or listen to voicemails, but research tells us most of you open and read your text messages almost right after you receive them.

99%

of text messages are opened

90%

of text messages are read within 3
minutes of receipt

We are working to get every teacher and parent in the district involved!

- It's easy to get started
- Remind keeps personal information private.

↑ Create a class

Once you create a class, you can invite students and parents, send announcements, and start conversations.

Class name

e.g. Math 101, Soccer Team, Chess Club

I will only message people 13 and older

It's okay if students are under 13. We'll ask for a parent's email address to keep everyone in the loop.

You might see a screen like this. If so, get the code and enter it.

A woman with long hair is smiling and leaning on a desk in a library. The desk has a book, a pen holder, and a stapler. Bookshelves filled with books are visible in the background. The text 'What's next?' is overlaid on the image.
